

Frequently Asked Questions 2022 Success Bonus - US

1. How will 2022 Success Bonus payments appear on pay slips?

Success Bonus appears as “Success Bonus” on US pay slips.

2. What is “bonus eligible earnings?”

Bonus eligible earnings are the earnings on which the bonus award is based and includes things like salary and hourly pay; overtime and double-time; shift & bilingual differentials and premium pay; holiday, sick, vacation, PTO, jury duty and bereavement time; and some other earnings. It does not include other bonuses, stipends, commissions, cash or non-cash awards, etc.

3. Why are my earnings different than my current salary?

Earnings may be different than your current salary or annualized pay for a few reasons:

- For employees who worked the entire year, there was an additional paycheck in Workday with our transition from semi-monthly to bi-weekly payroll, so in some cases, earnings might exceed salary.
- Bonus eligible earnings include base wages but also earnings such as overtime, shift & premium pay which are paid in addition to base wages.
- New hires & bonus eligibility changes: bonus earnings are based on eligible earnings beginning at time of hire or for the time period you worked in a Success Bonus-eligible role.
- Salary change: if you had a pay change during the year (e.g., merit increase in 2022, job change resulting in higher salary), that will be reflected in your actual eligible earnings. For example, two months of earnings at pre-merit pay rate in 2022 + 10 months of earnings at new pay rate.

4. How does the weighted bonus target work?

The weighted bonus target represents the weighted average bonus of eligible earnings multiplied by the target incentive during the earnings period. This primarily impacts employees whose target or eligibility changed during the performance period.

5. Are the values on the bonus statement rounded?

Yes, the values are rounded or truncated for display and spacing purposes.
